Rained Out Twice.

Both Thursday's and Friday's games between San Angelo and Ballinger were rained out at Ballinger.

Hardy has joined the team and "Long" Thomas is now a member. There ought to be some better playing.

Remarkable Ball Game.

Rock Springs, Wyo., and Green River played a game of ball a day or two ago in which a record was made. Pitcher Shandow of Rock Springs shut out Green River without a hit or run. Not a man reached first base, and out of a total of twenty-nine men who faced him, he struck out twenty. Rock Springs played perfect ball, making no errors. The team made five hits and scored six runs. Not since the days of the Cheyenne Indians had such ball been played in the State.

Singularly enough, the Rock Springs team was one of those that was shut out without a hit or a run by the Indians. Ralph Glaze, now with Dartmouth, and who will shortly join the Philadelphia Americans, did the pitching for the Cheyenne Indians in that game.

Dunham and Strible have been released from their connection with the San Angelo team. Dunham left last Thursday for Vanita, I. T.

Yesterday's ball game at Ballinger was a very pretty exhibition of ball playing. Ballinger won by a score of 5 to 2. Baller and Gaskell were matched against each other as pitchers. Erwin knocked one over the right field fence and got a home run. Baller suffered 9 hits and Gaskell 10.

Sir Walter Scott's Funeral.

That is a touching story told of the funeral of Sir Walter Scott: The road by which the procession took its way wound over a hill, whence can be seen one of the most beautiful of landscapes. It was his habit to pause there to gaze upon the scene, and when taking a friend out to drive he never failed to stop there and call the attention of his companion to the most beautiful points of the view. Few could refrain from tears when, carrying their master on his last journey, the horses stopped at the old familiar spot, as it were, for him to give a last look at the scene he had loved so well.

Mnemonic Systems Have Been in Use From Time Immemorial.

The art of rendering artificial aid to the memory by associating in the mind things difficult to remember with those which are easy of recollection is said to have originated with the Egyptians. The first person to reduce it to a system was, according to Cicero, the poet Simonides, who lived 500 B. C. His plan is known as the topical or locality plan and was in substance as follows: Choose a large house with a number of differently furnished apartments in it. Impress upon the mind carefully all that is noticeable in the house so that the mind can readily go over the parts. Then place a series of ideas in the house—the first in the hall, the next in the sitting room, and so on with the rest. Now, when one wishes to recall these ideas in their proper succession, commence going through the house, and the idea placed in each department will be found to readily recur to the mind in connection with it.

It is related that this mnemonic plan was first suggested to the poet by a tragic occurrence. Having been called from a banquet just before the roof of the house fell and crushed all the rest of the company, he found on returning that the bodies were so mutilated that no individual could be recognized, but by remembering the places which they had severally occupied at the table he was able to identify them. He was thus led to notice that the order of places may by association suggest the order of things.

Italy and Her Criminals.

In Italy whenever a famous criminal trial is on the newspapers take sides violently, search for evidence and assume all the prerogatives of the court. That they are even more sensational than the American press in this regard is indicated by the fact that Italian reading accounts of great cases in the American papers are always struck with the moderation of tone shown and wonder how it is that Americans take so little interest in what concerns the whole world. "The Americans are a great people," say the Italians, "but gold; they don't even warm to their own criminals!"

GRAIN RUST.

Drainage and Clean Cultivation as Preventives.

Probably in all cases where it is supposed that differences in the composition of the soil have some relation to the occurrence of grain rust the real cause for variation in this respect is the relative quantity of water in the soil. A poor soil will nearly always be somewhat elevated, and a rich soil low lying, as naturally the richer material of the soil will be washed to lower elevations. At the same time and for the same reason there will be more water in lower, fertile soils than in the poorer soils.

The more succulent and watery the plant becomes from the great quantity of water in the soil the more rapidly the rust will grow in the plant, and this is, therefore, the reason why more rust occurs in the fertile lower lying soils. It is evident that in grain grown on waterlogged soils there will be much more rust than elsewhere and that thorough drainage will tend to lessen the amount of rust.

On plants grown in heavily manured ground it is not directly the amount of nitrogenous material thus furnished to the plant that is the cause of more rust, but the fact that such plants are also thus enabled to absorb more moisture and always are more rank in growth and have softer straw.

It will follow that plenty of sunlight will have the effect of dissipating moisture and therefore to some extent will prevent the spread of the rust. Thorough and clean cultivation of the soil, exterminating all weeds and drilling the wheat instead of broadcasting will admit much more sunlight and should always be practiced.—M. A. Carleton.

Large Use of Fertilizers.

The Atlantic cotton states are using large quantities of commercial fertilizers this season under oats, corn, peas, potatoes and the very large acreage of other feed and truck crops now being planted in those states. The same is true in smaller degree of the southwestern cotton states.—Farm and Ranch.

The late bishop of London was once ordered by his physician to spend the winter in Algiers. The bishop said it was impossible; he had so many engagements. "Well, my lord bishop," said the specialist, "it either means Algiers or heaven." "Oh, in that case," said the bishop, "I'll go to Algiers."
